Agri Business Management (ABM)

The Agri-Business Management is an application of business rules in agriculture industry. The term "Agribusiness" which combines the terms "agriculture" and "business" describes the trade in farming and activities associated with farming. In order to reduce costs, increase revenues, and guarantee that farm goods are produced and supplied effectively, it applies business theories and techniques to the agricultural sector.

Research on farming performance and business growth has shown that profitable agricultural enterprises are internally cost-efficient and function in favourable political, economic, and physical-organic contexts. In order to maintain market pricing competitiveness, they can increase land, labour, and capital productivity, grow and turn a profit, and control expenses.

In order to improve production and sustainability, agribusiness management specialists can collaborate with farmers to create efficient farming techniques including crop rotation and soil management. Agribusiness management specialists can be associated with agribusiness companies in supply chain management to guarantee the prompt and effective transportation of agricultural goods from farms to customers. In the field of marketing, they may assist agricultural companies in creating successful marketing plans to advertise their goods and connect with more people. Furthermore, managing an agribusiness can have a big impact on poverty alleviation and rural development. The growth of agribusiness has the potential to raise living standards in rural areas of India, where a sizable section of the population depends heavily on agriculture for their livelihood.
